

Materiality

We help identify and prioritize the sustainability issues that matter most to your business.

Why materiality?

What exactly is it?

A materiality assessment identifies the main sustainability issues facing your business.

- ▶ As new stakeholder campaigns, public policy debates, standards, regulations and global events demand the attention of companies all over the world, the volume of potential material issues continues to grow.
- ▶ A materiality assessment helps your company navigate the sustainability landscape and build a plan for focusing on and responding to the most important issues for your business.
- ▶ Leading companies use materiality assessments as a foundation for sustainability strategy development, target setting and stakeholder engagement.

What are the benefits?

Once we've carried out an assessment, you'll be better positioned to:

- ▶ Integrate sustainability issues into your core business strategy.
- ▶ Allocate limited resources more effectively.
- ▶ Satisfy stakeholder demands and needs.
- ▶ Anticipate and address emerging issues.
- ▶ Meet sustainability reporting expectations.
- ▶ Strengthen communications around sustainability.
- ▶ Develop metrics to drive performance.

Our approach and scope of services

We have several core beliefs that we apply in our approach to materiality including:

- Embrace complexity.
- Understand the overlap of issues.
- No two companies' material issues are exactly the same.
- Integration of results is key to business success.

Depending on your needs we deliver and support full materiality assessments or simply help redesign and refresh what you have in place. Our process includes:

1. Explore existing issues and landscape

- Thorough research to identify issues.
- Carry out internal and external interviews.
- Attract buy-in from internal stakeholders.
- Targeted research including interviews with external experts and peers.

2. Map issues to the value chain and assess risks/opportunities

- Develop a methodology that aligns with internal systems, analyze positive and negative impacts, and map issues to your value chain.

3. Prioritize issues that matter the most

- Evaluate issues based on a range of criteria such as business impact, societal impact, stakeholder concern, and ability to influence.
- Finalize a shortlist of material issues that should be the focus of your strategy.

4. Make way for integration

- Share results and insights internally.
- Apply in internal engagement and external communications.
- Create visualizations that show how issues impact your business and value chain
